Federal Interagency Working Group-- Environmental Justice Directory

Preface

On February 11, 1994, President Clinton signed Executive Order 12898, “Federal Actions to Address Environmental Justice in Minority Populations and Low-income Populations,” to: (1) focus the attention of federal agencies on the human health and environmental conditions in minority communities and low-income communities with the goal of achieving environmental justice; and (2) foster non-discrimination in federal programs that substantially affect human health or the environment. Under Executive Order 12898, federal agencies were directed to make achieving environmental justice part of their mission by identifying and addressing disproportionately high and adverse human health or environmental effects on minority and low-income populations in the United States and its territories and possessions. The Executive Order also makes clear that its provisions apply to programs involving Native Americans.

To assist in carrying out their responsibilities, the Executive Order created an Interagency Working Group (IWG) comprised of various federal agencies and White House offices, and chaired by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). This comprehensive environmental justice directory identifies the contacts in the various federal agencies that make up the IWG. With this resource, the Office of Environmental Justice hopes to enhance coordination and communication among federal agencies, state and local governments, and the public in addressing environmental justice issues. In particular, we hope this directory will serve as a “roadmap” for the public who must have access to several agencies in order to address the multiplicity of concerns and problems in their communities.

The “Environmental Justice Federal Interagency Directory” and Executive Order 12898 are also available on the Internet at <http://www.epa.gov/compliance/environmentaljustice>

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

The mission of the Department of Agriculture (DA) is to enhance the quality of life for the American people by supporting the production of agriculture, ensuring a safe, affordable, nutritious and accessible food supply; caring for agricultural, forest, and range lands; supporting the sound development of rural communities; providing economic opportunities for farm and rural residents; expanding global markets for agricultural and forest products and services; and working to reduce hunger in America and throughout the world. Under this mission, the Undersecretary for Natural Resources and Environment has the leadership responsibility for the implementation of environmental justice across all USDA mission areas and agencies. The USDA Environmental Justice Coordinator serves as the focal point for the implementation of environmental justice, serving as staff to the Undersecretary, Natural Resources and Environment and to the Environmental Justice Steering Committee.

◆ National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration
Office Of Sustainable Development and Intergovernmental Affairs

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's (NOAA) Office of Sustainable Development and Intergovernmental Affairs works with governmental and non-governmental partners at the federal, state, and local levels to promote sustainable development solutions that advance the goals of environmental stewardship and environmental assessment and prediction. The Office is dedicated to meeting this challenge by helping find solutions that bring balance between economic vitality, social equity, and environmental integrity. To this end, the Office works closely with coastal communities to relieve the economic pressures that are often a barrier to promoting sustainability and to assist with the redevelopment of brownfields in coastal areas.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

◆ Economic Development Administration

The Economic Development Administration (EDA) provides grants to economically-distressed communities to generate new employment, help retain existing jobs and stimulate industrial and commercial growth. Working with distressed communities so they may empower themselves to develop and implement economic development and revitalization strategies, EDA seeks to ensure sustainable development. The EDA's Public Works Program helps fund construction of public works and development facilities which promote industrial and commercial growth such as industrial parks, business incubator facilities, water and sewer improvements, skill training facilities and other developments. The EDA's Economic Adjustment Program helps states and local areas design and implement strategies for adjusting to changes which cause or threaten to cause serious economic damage. Such changes may develop suddenly or over time, and result from industrial or corporate restructuring, new federal laws or requirements, military base closures or reduction in defense expenditures, depletion of natural resources, and natural disasters.

Bureau of Land Management

The Bureau of Land Management (BLM) is a multiple use resource management agency responsible for managing over 264 million acres of land - - about one-eighth of the land in the United States - - as well as 300 million additional acres of subsurface mineral resources. Most of these lands are located in the western United States, including Alaska, and are characterized by extensive rangelands, forests, high mountains, arctic tundra, and deserts. The BLM manages a wide variety of commercial, cultural, recreational, and wilderness resources on the public lands. It is BLM's mission to sustain the health, diversity, and productivity of the public lands for the use and enjoyment of present and future generations.

Bureau of Reclamation

The Bureau of Reclamation is an agency with a strategic plan outlining numerous programs, initiatives and activities that will help the western states, Native American Tribes and others meet new water needs and balance the multitude of competing uses of water in the West. The mission is to assist in meeting the increasing water demands of the West while protecting the environment and the public's investment in these structures. Great emphasis is placed in fulfilling the water delivery obligations, water conservation, water recycling and reuse, and the development of partnerships with customers, states, and Indian Tribes, and in finding ways to bring together the variety of interests to address the competing needs for the limited water resources.

Minerals Management Service

The Minerals Management Service's (MMS) primary responsibilities are to manage the mineral resources located on the nation's Outer Continental Shelf (OCS), collect revenues from the federal OCS and onshore federal and Indian lands, and distribute those revenues. In working to meet its responsibilities the Offshore Minerals Management Program administers the OCS competitive leasing program and oversees the safe and environmentally sound exploration and production of our nations' offshore natural gas, oil and other mineral resources. The MMS Royalty Management Program meets its responsibilities by ensuring the efficient, timely, and accurate collection and disbursement of revenue from mineral leasing and production due to Indian tribes and all other, states, and the U.S. Treasury.

Fish and Wildlife Service

The Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) is the principal federal agency responsible for conserving, protecting and enhancing fish, wildlife and plants and their habitats for the continuing benefit of the American People. Among its key functions, the Service enforces federal wildlife laws, administers the Endangered Species Act, manages migratory bird populations, restores nationally significant fisheries, conserves and restores wildlife habitat such as wetland, and helps foreign governments with their conservation efforts. It also oversees the federal aid program that distributes hundreds of millions of dollars in excise taxes on fishing and hunting equipment to state fish and wildlife agencies.

Community Relations Service

The Community Relations Service (CRS), an arm of the U.S. Department of Justice, is a specialized Federal conciliation service available to State and local officials to help resolve and prevent racial and ethnic conflict, violence and civil disorder. CRS helps local officials and residents tailor locally defined resolutions when conflict and violence threaten community stability and well-being. Created by the Civil Rights Act of 1964, CRS is the only Federal agency dedicated to preventing and resolving racial and ethnic tensions, incidents, and civil disorders. It assists State and local units of government, private and public organizations, and community groups in restoring community racial stability and harmony.

Executive Office for Weed and Seed (EOWS), Office of Justice Programs

The Office of Justice Programs EOWS manages Operation Weed and Seed at the national level. Weed and Seed is essentially a strategy for coordinating all levels of government, the private sector, and community residents in an innovative and comprehensive approach to prevent and control crime and improve the quality of life. There are over 200 Weed and Seed sites, which range in size from several neighborhood blocks to 15 square miles. Weed and Seed sites have the option of including in their strategies and budgets environmental law enforcement, lead abatement, brownfields- related activities, and other activities with environmental implications. Dissemination of information and training on these topics is provided by EOWS in coordination with EPA and HHS.

Office of Tribal Justice (OTJ)

The Office of Tribal Justice coordinates Department policy on Indian affairs and pending legislation affecting tribes, both within the Department and with other federal agencies, and serves as a permanent channel of government-to-government communications with federally recognized Indian tribes. OTJ encourages internal consistency of Justice Department policies and litigating positions and regularly engages in dialogue with tribal leaders regarding justice systems, law enforcement in Indian country, sacred sites and religious freedom, pending legislation, and aspects of the federal trust responsibility. Although OTJ is not a litigating component, when issues regarding the protection of tribal land and resources have arisen, OTJ works with Indian tribes, the Environment Division, U.S. Attorney's offices, and other federal agencies to resolve these issues in a manner consistent with tribal sovereignty. Tribal leaders are encouraged to contact the Office of Tribal Justice directly as they confront issues relating to the Department of Justice or the administration of justice in Indian country.

United States Attorneys Office

The 93 U.S. Attorneys and approximately 5,000 Assistant U.S. Attorneys are responsible for handling the majority of criminal prosecutions and civil litigation on behalf of the United States. One U.S. Attorney is assigned to each of the 94 federal judicial districts with the exception of Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands, where a single U.S. Attorney serves both districts. The U.S. Attorneys are the chief federal law enforcement officers within their respective districts. They also carry out the important role of liaison with federal, state, and local law enforcement officers and members of the community.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

♦ Office of the Assistant Secretary for Policy

The United States Department of Labor is charged with preparing the American workforce for new and better jobs, and ensuring the adequacy of America's workplaces. It is responsible for the administration and enforcement of over 180 federal statutes. These legislative mandates and their implementing regulations cover a wide variety of workplace activities, including protecting workers' wages, health and safety, employment and pension rights, promoting equal employment opportunity, administering job training programs, unemployment insurance and workers' compensation programs, strengthening free collective bargaining and collecting, analyzing and publishing labor and economic statistics. Consistent with this mission, the Department of Labor is also committed to environmental justice, sustainable economic development and redevelopment and is engaged in the development and implementation of job training programs for environmental careers. In addition, the Department is committed to the expansion of economic opportunity through job training, small business opportunities and good quality wage career jobs. The Office of the Assistant Secretary for Policy, as a cross-cutting agency responsible for providing economic policy analysis and advice to the Secretary and Deputy Secretary of Labor in formulating, implementing, and evaluating the Department's regulatory and other programs and labor policies, provides leadership, coordination and direction to the Department's environmental justice policies and programs. Department of Labor agencies that provide policy and program support to environmental justice include among others, the Employment and Training Administration, the Employment Standards Administration, the Office of Civil Rights, the Office of Small Business Programs and the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs.

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY

The Executive Order 12898 signed on February 14, 1994, charged the Environmental Protection Agency with coordinating the federal government's efforts to integrate environmental justice into the day to day operations of those agencies named in the Order. The Order directed EPA to establish an Interagency Working Group and to report to The President on the strategy to be used to accomplish this effort of focusing federal attention on the environment and human health conditions of minority populations and low-income population with the goal of achieving environmental protection for all. Meetings of this Interagency Working Group continue on a regular but unscheduled basis. The EPA established an internal environmental justice network in each Headquarters Office and Region to be the focal point for environmental justice.

The names and contact information for the individuals serving in this capacity are listed below. A description of each office and region can be found later in this section. The Office of Environmental Justice, located in the Office of Enforcement and Compliance Assurance, serves as the Agency coordinator for the Environmental Justice Network.

◆ Office of Planning and Policy Analysis

The Office of Planning and Policy Analysis (OPPA) objective is to ensure consistency and address emerging issues that arise in EPA's enforcement and compliance assurance programs. OPPA attempts to anticipate and identify issues that cut across all types of environmental laws. While ensuring compliance with federal environmental laws, OPPA supports EPA's efforts to identify innovative environmental protection tools that move beyond compliance. OPPA helps to articulate and advocate EPA programs that underpin and stimulate a broad spectrum of environmental compliance and protection tools.

◆ Office of Site Remediation Enforcement

The Office of Site Remediation Enforcement (OSRE) strives to protect human health and the quality of the environment by providing direction, evaluation, oversight and assistance for remediation enforcement at non-federally owned sites subject to CERCLA, RCRA, OPA and UST programs. We support and provide the means for the regions and states to vigorously and effectively enforce these statutes, and it is the skill and commitment of the people in OSRE that allows us to accomplish that mission. We are advocates for enforcement perspectives in national program policies and regulations. Our goals are to achieve prompt site cleanup and maximum liable party participation in performing and paying for cleanup in ways which promote environmental justice and fairness.

◆ Office of Environmental Information

The Office of Environmental Information (OEI) was established to meet the changing information needs of the public through the establishment of a central program office which is responsible for information management, information policy development and information technology stewardship. OEI plays a key role in supporting EPA's mission to protect human health and the environment by integrating quality environmental information to make it useful for informing decisions, improving information management, documenting performance, and measuring success. In addition to improving the quality of information and developing the infrastructure to support it, OEI also works closely with external stakeholders and partners to establish and oversee information-related policies and procedures. Such groups include representatives from state, local and federal agencies, tribes, the regulated community, interest groups, educators and the general public.

Office of Prevention, Pesticides, and Toxic Substances

EPA's Office of Prevention, Pesticides and Toxic Substances (OPPTS) promotes pollution prevention and the public's right to know about chemical risks. OPPTS evaluates pesticides and chemicals to safeguard all Americans, including children and other vulnerable members of the population, as well as the most threatened species and ecosystems from environmental harm. Dealing with emerging issues like endocrine disruptors and lead poisoning prevention are top priorities. OPPTS promotes the use of safer chemicals, processes, and technologies; promotes life-cycle management of environmental problems such as asbestos; advances pollution prevention through voluntary action by industry; and promotes the public's right to know.

Office of Research and Development

The Office of Research and Development (ORD) is the scientific and technological arm of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Comprised of three headquarters offices, three national research laboratories and two national centers, ORD is organized around a basic strategy of risk assessment and risk management to remediate environmental and human health problems. ORD focuses on the advancement of basic peer-reviewed scientific research and the implementation of cost-effective, common sense technology. Fundamental to ORD's mission is a partnership with the academic scientific community, through extramural research grants and fellowships to help develop the sound environmental research necessary to ensure effective policy and regulatory decisions.

OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET

Office of Management and Budget

OMB's predominant mission is to assist the President in overseeing the preparation of the Federal budget and to supervise its administration in Executive Branch agencies. In helping to formulate the President's spending plans, OMB evaluates the effectiveness of agency programs, policies, and procedures, assesses competing funding demands among agencies, and sets funding priorities. OMB ensures that agency reports, rules, testimony, and proposed legislation are consistent with the President's budget and with Administration policies.

In addition, OMB oversees and coordinates the Administration's procurement, financial management, information, and regulatory policies. In each of these areas, OMB's role is to help improve administrative management, to develop better performance measures and coordinating mechanisms, and to reduce any unnecessary burdens on the public.
